

April 10th, 2015

Australian research indicates problems in the quality of products and prices

Study by the University of Melbourne, in Australia, makes it clear that climate interference will translate into foods with less quality and more expensive to the consumer.

Source: The Guardian

Nigeria suffers from changes in climate

Droughts, floods and persistent excess rains have resulted in disasters in Nigeria. This scenario damages the self sufficiency in food production, since the negative effects of climate hinder the country's agriculture.

Source: AllAfrica

Drought in southeastern Brazil can last 30 years

Expert says water crisis affecting the region will remain for a long time, creating problems for agribusiness. The impact of this, which already happens today, appears in the delay of soybean cultivation, fall in coffee productivity and changes in the food production cycle, such as corn.

Source: Revista Globo Rural

Climate crisis can turn into tragedy foretold

This situation becomes increasingly likely if strong measures are not taken, says the doctor in Sociology, Liszt Vieira. According to him, there will be multiplication of extreme weather events such as intense heat, droughts and floods. Among other consequences, there will be compromised food security of people and the agricultural income, which will be affected by environmental degradation.

Source: Esquerda.net

This newsletter is produced by CEAGESP Communication and Marketing Coordination

www.ceagesp.gov.br

f ceagesp.official

e ceagespoficial