

July 31st, 2015

Dear reader,

This is the 10th edition of our newsletter. We would like to thank the support received to date and make ourselves available to further improve this important communication channel. Our work is focused on bringing information to you that receive, read, comment and forward this newsletter to your contacts. Our challenge is to always keep in evidence the debate on the impacts of climate change on global agriculture, seeking to bring, wherever possible, reflections that allow us to overcome this situation. Thanks!

Here comes the 29th WUWM Congress

More than 170 delegates from 15 countries have confirmed their presence at the 29th Annual Congress of the World Union of Wholesale Markets (WUWM). With the theme "The environment and the future of wholesale markets", the meeting aims to bring together businessmen, marketers, managers and leaders of the fresh food supply sector. For more information and registration, please check the Congress site. The event will take place in Campinas, Brazil, between September 23rd and 26th.

Source: WUWM Congress

Agriculture must be part of a global pact

Only in this way it can better manage agricultural production in relation to the effects of climate change.

Source: SciDev.Net

Resilient productions can be alternative to climate change

Support for a local network of diverse foods can create a more resilient agricultural system, capable of facing the problems arising from climate change.

Source: Mountain Xpress

China has worst drought in 60 years

Harm to chinese agriculture already spend US$ 1 billion due to the effects caused by El Niño. The areas most affected are producers of grains, especially soybeans and corn.

Source: Notícias Agrícolas

This newsletter is produced by CEAGESP Communication and Marketing Coordination.

CEAGESP

www.ceagesp.gov.br

ceagesp.official

ceagespoficial